

Ask The Tennessee Mockingbird

by June Griffin

"She dipped her pen in controversy"

ence. The serpent who beguiled Eve just asked a few questions to make her doubt her God and her stability. In the end, she was right in pointing out that the serpent beguiled her and she was given a promise of a son who would smite the head of the serpent, Whose blood was pure of original sin because God was his father.

The agenda of the UN was once published: One race, one sex, one world, one religion. Boundaries, they say, cause division and the UN is opposed to division. How to achieve this egghead and unnatural purpose is indeed the dilemma. Claiming to be devoid of religion, yet it features a meditation room, in the center of which is a large black block sitting there for you to think upon while you wonder what on earth the chaotic, so-called 'modern art' paintings on the wall mean.

Communist-sympathizers like Picasso hold that some religions are more equal than others.

Let's just take the agenda of one race. Mind you, this agenda is the darling of social scientists whose disciples sit in universities and dream up this nutty stuff. But alas, they have invented nothing new. One of my favorite American Patriots, Patrick Henry, thought to solve the Indian problem by intermarriage, for he reasoned that once the white man married with the Indian, the result in a few generations would be White and thus assimilated. It worked in a lot of instances, but unfortunately for Henry's thesis, some stayed separated into their own races and there is a modicum of Indians left, though there are many actors who want to get in on the tax dole and property grab who claim to be Indians. Same thing with the darling of the left wing during the Civil War, Frederick Douglas. This MLK fore-runner stated in a debate with Abram Pryne right after the War that he was glad that the black man was intermarrying with the whites because it would eliminate the black race since in a generation or two the offspring would be white. He thought this was a good thing.

I do not think it a good thing. And obviously some other black men didn't think so either so they have maintained their race. Real South Koreans maintained their pure blood and are quite happy to do so, a grief for the Communists in the UN. So much for UN philosophies and their antecedents.

Now we have another twist: La Raza - The Race. They tell me that the latest supreme court appointee is a member of La Raza. This Mockingbird has never seen the documentation of belonging to this proud bunch, but there is a certain patriotic lady in Rhea County who contacted a certain Texas University political science professor, who stated that "gringos must be eliminated," and still holds to that philosophy. How they will be eliminated is another dilemma and who will be eliminated is yet to be seen. Of course, should this supreme court justice be a member of The Race, it would be easy to get her recused from hearing trials that involve such issues, so she would be out of the mix, seeing she would be for the "elimination of gringos." This Mockingbird holds that almighty God, her creator, made the races at a point in time just following the world-wide flood and that he is pleased to see the races he created, their nations in which he placed them, each in their sphere, praising him for creating them and giving them Ten Commandments to govern the lawless and disobedient who wish to live off other people and worship other gods. See Deuteronomy 32 - The Song of Moses.

As for the black block they worship, is it coal? After all, if one could control the natural resources, minerals and labor, you can maintain your race of rulers and be a degreed geneticist or evolutionary geologist.
